User Story 1:

Log-In

      The user must login using OAuth2 via a third party. They will be prompted to login through their Facebook or Twitter account. Upon entering their credentials, they will be confirmed and will proceed to User Story 2. If the credentials are invalid, they will be informed of an error and will be prompted to try again.

User Story 2:

Senator Selection

      The user will be presented with a "character-selection-like" screen. They will select two senators to "face-off." This will be akin to the "Super Smash Bros." select screen:

After selecting the senators they wish to use, a button saying "Fight" will be presented. After clicking it, the website will load the data for each representative. While the data is loading, the user will be presented with a loading progress bar. Once completed, the user will proceed to User Story 3.

User Story 3:

Survey

      At the beginning, the "face-off" will be presented like a boxing match. The representatives will be placed on either side of the screen with a bi-colored bar in between them. Various yes-or-no questions will be presented to the user one at a time. Upon answering one, the bar will shift in favor towards one of the senators: the senator who's views align more with the answer of the user to that question. At the end of the survey, the bar should be in favor of one senator or the other, upon which the user will proceed to User Story 4.

User Story 4:
Result
The user is given a "winner": the senator with whom their "views" (as discerned by the survey) align more closely. Their answers to each question are revealed as well as data indicating whether or not the senator agreed would agree with their answer. Upon reviewing their results, the user can then compare their results with others'.

User Story 5:
Comparison
The user is presented with statistical information about what other users answered, what other senators were selected etc. They are also given an option to share their results on social media. Lastly, they are given an option to start another "Versus" match.